OF 'SLAVING' CHARGE

Jury Decides He Did Not Entice Mrs. Shaw Away From Her Home.

WHITE PLAINS, N. Y., March 27. Just two hours after it had filed out, the jury acquitted Richard S. Darling of the charge of "inducing, enticing, or procuring" Mrs. Katherine Lyall Shaw "to reside with him for immoral purposes" at the Gedney Farm Hotel. Darling, whose contidence had never been shaken, walked across the room and shook hands with the jury. His mother did likewise. Robert Marsden Shaw, at whose in-stance the criminal proceedings had been brought, was not present when the verdict was brought in. His man-ner toward Darling during the trial, and some statements made on the stand, convinced the authorities that it would be best, in case of an acquittal, that he and Darling should have no opportunity to meet.

The charge of Judge Platt came at the close of a day of excitement seldom seen in the courtroom, though Harry Thaw has fought for freedom here.

The sensational developments of the first day were overshadowed by the appearance of Robert Marsden Shaw, the deserted husband, on the witness stand.

Shaw testified that he had offered to discontinue the suit for damages against
